Rio de Janeiro, January 13th, 1890.

THE sudden revival of the Misiones question after the revolution, in spite of the fact that a convention had been signed to send a second commission to determine the boundary line and then, in case of disagreement, to refer the whole matter to arbitration, has very much the appearance of undue pressure on the part of the Argentines. Under the provisions of the convention referred to, there was no need of any such haste on the part of the provisional government to settle the dispute, while the final resolve to send a cabinet min ister to Montevideo to meet the Argentine minister, and the semi-official announcement that a compromise will be arranged by which the territory in dispute will be divided up, indicates that Brazil is being pushed into a corner and is inclined to yield what has heretofore been claimed as hers by right. We have always believed in the justice of the Brazilian claim to this territory and shall regret to see it abandoned in the first diplomatic dispute in which the republic figures.

THE action of the provisional government in decreeing the separation of church and state merits the heartiest praise, notwithstanding the fact that the manner in which it has been done is totally opposed to all republican ideas. Under normal conditions all such questions should be decided by the representatives of the people through regular parliamentary channels, but in view of the fact that a popular assembly would only with the greatest difficulty arrive at a conclusion on this question, perhaps it is wiser to have it decided by an arbitrary decree. The state church has been a serious stumbling block in the progress of the empire, and there is every reason to believe that it would seriously hinder the fullest development of the republic. Both in the interests of the state and of the church this measure can not fail to be of the greatest benefit, So far as an outsider can judge, the equality of the Catholic church with all others has had the result of increasing its purity and efficiency, while, on the contrary, wherever it exists supreme it is corrupt and reactionary. In the interests of the church, therefore, as well as in the interests of the country, this decree of separation comes with an inspiration and promise which ought to be universally hailed as the dawn of a new era, notwithstanding its contradictory provisions and its mistaken grant of optional authority to the states.

ONE of the first acts of the new republican governor of Pará was to impose a special tax of 20 reis per kilo on rubber entering thirty American teachers have been kept that city for exportation, the product of which-estimated at 150,000$ per annumis to be paid to a "ring," or monopoly, composed of native merchants and known under the title of Companhia Mercantil do Pará. One object of this company is to obtain control of the rubber trade and then compel an advance of prices. This promised result is the "bait" held out to the governor and people of Pará and in swallowing it they appear to entirely overlook the fact that they are discriminating most unjustly against the loreign firms engaged in the rubber trade and directly aiding in the creation of a monopoly, under the management of a notorious local speculator, which will eventually cause incalculable harm to the trade. We see by our Pará exchanges that the foreign exporters have entered a protest against the iniquitous tax, and we understand that these protests have also been brought to the attention of the central government, but thus far to no purpose. In view of the prejudice caused to some of the most important houses in Pará who will be unable to compete in a trade so unequal, and also in view of the principle of discrimination against foreigners which it establishes, it is most important that the minister of finance should at once take the question into serious consideration. Brazil can not now afford the reputation for injustice and unsound economic methods which this Pará case will surely give her. If this act is permitted to stand, the foreign merchants will begin to seriously consider the propriety of withdrawing altogether from a country where discriminations of this character are made. The foreign merchants have done much to build up trade in Pará and throughout the whole country, and more depends upon the assistance given by their capital and the long credits allowed by them, than the government may be aware." A policy of repression-which is the virtual effect of this Pará measure-will do infinite harm to the resources and credit of the whole country, for it will drive away capital and undermine the reputation of Brazilians for business integrity and tair dealing.

THE announcement that the government intends to send a commission of six to study the various educational systems of Europe and the United States will serve one good purpose-that of calling attention to the worthlessness of all these instrumentalities for the acquisition of proper educational methods. Commissions without number have already investigated this and other kindred subjects, and with absolutely no good result to show for it. It is a waste of money, a waste of time and leads to infinite confusion. It was a favorite mode of procedure under the monarchy, for it manifested a cheap interest in progressive institutions and at the same time afforded desirable positions, with expenses paid, for the favored friends of those in power. As everyone must know, the time abroad was spent principally in Paris or in idle travel, and the commissioner generally managed to return with so vague an idea of the subject that his recommendations led only to a greater confusion than ever. If now the government seriously wishes to improve the public schools of the country -and that they need improvement everyone must know-the only sound and rational method is that adopted by the Argentines some twenty years ago, under the lead of President Sarmiento, in engaging a number of experienced normal school teachers (ladies) in the United States, creating special schools for them, and then leaving it to them to educate and train teachers for the public schools of the country. The system has worked so successfully that some employed by the government ever since, and their training schools have become practically indispensible. * If Brazil desires to adopt this plan, all the government needs to do is to establish a half dozen normal schools, in as many large cities, and then engage fifteen or twenty experienced American teachers to take charge of their organization and management. All official interference must be forbidden, and the teachers must be given ample means and full powers to carry on their schools after the most approved methods, and if this is done we will guarantee that ten years will produce so great a change in the methods and results of public instruction in this country that Brazilians will wonder how they could have deferred the improvement so long.

The cabinet selected by Visconde de Ouro Preto was composed of the following ministers, he himself retaining the portfolio of finance : empire, Barão de Loreto ; justice, Senator Candido de Oliveira; foreign affairs, Deputy Diana : agriculture, Deputy Lourenço de Albuquerque; war, Marshal Visconde de Maracajú; marine, Admiral Barão do Ladario. In point of ability the cabinet was above rather than below the average, but it contained, perhaps, more of the element of rashness than has usually been found in Brazilian ministries. The premier was a man of much experience in public life, a brilliant lawyer, a good debater, and a man who ranked high as a leader in his party; but he was a man of hasty, capricious temper, unsound judgment, ambitious, unscrupulous and arbitrary. He was not selected to "save the monarchy," as so many are now trying to show, for no one then dreamed that the monarchy was in any immediate danger. He was chosen because of his availability and the belief that he could maintain himself against a hostile Chamber and secure the triumph of his party in the approaching elections. The selection of Candido de Oliveira, a consummate political manager, as minister of justice, in whose hands rested so much of the election machinery, shows how strong was the purpose to win the With the public funds at the elections. disposal of the premier, the national guard and judicial offices at the disposal of the minister of justice, and an unfailing supply of decorations and titles at the disposal of the minister of empire, it was confidently believed that the ministry could carry everything before it, and to the lasting shame of the country, the republicans included, these calculations did not prove to be unfounded.

The programme laid down by Visconde de Ouro Preto on his accession to power was liberal to an extreme. It included: (1) extension of the ballot; (2) provincial autonomy; (3) freedom of worship and civil marriage; (4) reduction in export duties; (5) abolition of life senatorships; (6) a new land law; (7) aid to credit establishments; and many others of similar character. Unfortunately for his reputation no serious effort was made to realize any of these reforms, while on the question of provincial autonomy, or federation, his views underwent so radical a change as to warrant the belief that he had abandoned the idea altogether. Had he been more sincere in his promises, less cynical in his treatment of opponents, and more sensitive to the real interests of the country, rather than solicitous for the selfish interests of his friends and party, the result might have been widely different. On June 11th the customary explanations and a formal announce ment of the new ministerial programme were made. A insignificant incident on this occasion was a violent speech by Padre João Manoel, a reactionary conservative, who closed by shouting "Down with the monarchy! Long live the republic!" At the close of the debate the Chamber of Deputies passed a motion of want of confidence in the ministry, proposed by Deputy Gomes On the de Castro, by a vote of 79 to 20. 17th the Assembly was formally dissolved, elections were ordered for August 31st, and an extraordinary session was called for November 20th.

During these events, the Conde d'Eu set out on a visit to the northern provinces, to see for himself their condition and prospects antl to learn the real feeling of the people regarding the succession of the Princess Imperial. A prominent republican agitator, Silva Jardim, started out on the voyage with him for the purpose of counteracting his influence, but after inciting disturbances at Bahia and Pernambuco, which did not result so favorably to himself as was anticipated, he abandoned the venture at the latter place and soon returned to Rio. The Conde d'Eu continued his journey up the coast to Pará, and thence up the Amazon to Manáos, visiting all important places. making excursions into the interior wher ever possible, and being received generally with much enthusiasm and loyalty. In a few places there were slight manifestations of discourtesy and ill nature, but it was only after the revolution that these trivial incidents were magnified into occurrences of political and patriotic importance. On his return, the Conde d'Eu took occasion to state at a meeting in Pernambuco that "the imperial family desired only the happiness and prosperity of the country," and that they would retire whenever the people manifested a wish to that effect. journey was extended through a period of about six weeks and was productive of much good feeling, but it did not have the political significance generally ascribed to it.

Diario Official, January 8th

FREEDOM OF RELIGION.

Marshal Manoel Deodoro da Fonseca, chief of the provisional government constituted by the army and navy, in the name of the nation, decrees:

Art, 1. - It is prohibited to the federal authority, as well as to those of the federated states, to issue laws, regulations, or administrative acts, establishing any religion, or forbidding such, or to create distinctions between inhabitants of the country whether through motives of belief, or of philosophical or religious opinions.

Art. 2.—To all religious professions belong equally the faculty of exercising their worship, governing themselves according to their faith, and not being annoyed in private or public acts which may concern the exercise of this decree.

Art. 3.-The liberty hereby established includes not only individuals in individual acts, but equally also churches, associations and institutes in they are organized; there pertaining to all the full right of organization and of collective existence according to the creed and discipline of each, without nterference by the public powers.

Art. 4. — The church patronage (padroado) with all its justitutions, protections and prerogatives is hereby declared extinct.

Art. 5. — To all churches and religious professions there will be recognized a juridical personality for the acquirement and administration of property, under the limits imposed by the laws of mort-main, each one to retain the ownership of its present possessions, as well as its edifices for worship.

Art. 6. — The federal government continues to wrovide the revenue for the support of the present de-positions in the Catholic service and will subsidize for one year the professorships at seminaries; each state to have free choice as to the maintenance of this or any other creed, without contravention of the dispositions of preceding articles.

Art. 7. — Contrary dispositions are revoked.

Assembly-Room of the Provisional Government of the Republic of the United States of Brazil, January 7th, 1890, the second of the Republic. - Manoel Deodoro da Fonseca, and all the members of the government.

VET another name for the United States of America has been discovered, "the United States of British America." What is the matter with the correct name of the American republic that Brazilians are so anxious to improve upon it?

What proportion of the shares of the above are held in Rio is impossible to estimate, but more or less were taken. We omit the Pernambuco and Bahia banks, for, although the first is virtually a branch of the Banco Nacional, the shares of neither are supposed to be held generally in Rio. There were further reported as organized; the Banco do Commercio e Industria, Banco Ro-Clarense, Banco Popular de Tanbué and Banco de Lorena, in the state of S. Paulo and the Banco Hypothecario de Porto Alegre, Rio Grande do Sul, regarding which we have no data, save that the first will take over the banking business of Messrs, Nielsen & Co. at the capital of the state of S. -One of the morning journals on the 9th filled its issue with the Ouro Preto manifesto. An after noon colleague complains that the morning paper was not at all "newsy," and thinks the manifesto might have been diversified by illustrations.

...On the 8th inst. the minister of interior autho ized the port health inspector to take steps for obliging steamers coming to this port to observe the rules of the saintary convention. The penalty it appears will be the withdrawal of packet privileges.

-An Austrian sailor sent to the Misericordia hospital on the 18th ult, with a fractured leg and bruises, caused by a fall on board ship, died there of typhoid fever on the 7th inst. Everything seems to turn to dangerous fevers at the hospital, and an investigation is necessary.

-Another of those 10$ notes of the Banco Nacional that disappeared from Laemmert's shops National that suppose the part of the property of the profile property of the profile profile

-The transport Maderra left on the 9th on a voyage of instruction with a number of navacoyoge or instruction with a number of naval cadets. For some strange reason some 30 odd appoint and a military guard go as passengers by the transport for Fernando Noronha. This may be praiseworthy economy, but it seems very bad taste.

Sr. Ferreira Vianna, noted as an advocate and as a lay-brother of a monastery here, as a violent opponent of the ex-Emperor to whom he applied the epithet of a "caricature Cæsar," and as a min-ister of the crown in the João Alfredo cabinet, has taken his many talents to Europe—probably to

-Rumor says the minister of the interior will appoint a commission of six professors, under the leadership of Sr. Menezes Vicira, to visit the principal schools of the United States, Switzerland, France and Sweden. We were under the impres-sion that France had been investigated sufficiently, but must have been mistaken. But then Paris is must have b an attraction

-The embalmed remains of Her Majesty, D. Thereza Christina, last Empress of Brazil, were Thereas Christma, last Empress of Brazil, were deposited at the S. Vicente de Fóra pantheon in Lisbon on the 11th inst. There were numerous masses for the repose of the late Empress's soul here and in varison cities and towns of the interior, and the sentiment of sorrow at her death has been general, if somewhat tardy and superficial.

-Rumor has it that the Theatro Lyrico is to return to its first love and will shortly be occupied return to its first love and will shortly be occupied by a grand circus company. Sacrilege is the only expression that occurs to us in registering the fact that horses, equertinenes and clowns are to anuse the plebs where Gayarre and Tamagno, Sanz and Borghi-Mano, Bassi and others, sang, directed, etc., for the delight of the patricians.

-A decree dated on January 2nd orders a census to be held on December 31st next and reorganizes to be held on December 31st next and reorganizes (sic) he statistical department. This department has so far been entirely occupied in organizing tables of diaffs on the Treasury for uncurned salaries. The new department will cost 133,400s per annum for the staff's salaries alone, and the capacity of the new director leads us to believe that it will all be wasted.

-The minister of finance on the 4th addressed a sharp and merited circular to Treasury officials a sharp and mented circular to Treasury officials regarding the inordinate delay in organizing the statistics of their departments. The minister has a case at the custom house in Rio that has not for years lumished figures showing the official value of imports and exports monthly, although these could be collected as readily as are the tables showing the revenue, and the want of them figures as a serious inconvenience to many persons, ourselves included. included.

-It is not surprising that the Brazilians should feel annoyed at the absolutely false telegrams sent from this city to River Plate journals—or perhaps there manufactured. But this lying by correspondents of River Plate journals here is not new! How many times have the most abruming telegrams as to the sanitary condition of Rio been sent down, to be forwarded to Europe, without the Brazilian press raising any protest whatever! The fact is, the Argentines have taken advantage of the good natured Brazilians, and the results are gradually appearing. Still further, when important events are concealed here and the city is full of exaggerated rumors, is there not some excuse for false telegrams? feel annoyed at the absolutely false telegrams sent

FINANCIAL NOTES

-The exchanges at the clearing house for the five working days of last week amounted to 3,716,- 779$350.

—The provincial internal revenue of the state of Bahia for 1888-89 (sic), as reported by the recebedoria, was 1,019,740$024.

—The December receipts of the Victoria, Espirito Sauto, custom-house amounted to 24,844$737, of which 19,946$237 were from import duties.

of which 19,9408-27 were turn import united —A very considerable amount of "second hand" exchange turned up in the market on the 11th, speculators having apparently weakened on the "thear" side. At the close of business this paper was freely oftered at 26d but takers were scarce.

was reety offered at 26d but takers were scarce.

On the 8th a contract was signed between the representative of the state of Rio de Janeiro and the Banco Colonizador e Agricola for a 5 per cent. Ioan of 2,000,000$ at 95 per cent. One quarter is payable in cash and the balance in 30, 60 and 90 days.

—The broker implicated in the muddy affair of 1,000 shares has washed his hands of the business. The purchaser's agent declares that it was a book-keeper who gave Sis. Leitão Irmão & Co's, name, because his own would not be accepted by seller's broker.

-The official figures of receipts at the custom —The otheral figures of receipts at the custom house in Rio for 1889 and 1888 are given at 59, 014,7978874 and 51,031,866$279 respectively. The table published in the Diario Official is so badly printed and full of errors in proof reading that we cannot divide the items as usual.

cannot divide the ttems as usual.

—On December 31st the Banco de S. Paulo had in circulation 660,3305 in its gold notes, against which it held in cash in gold 3,326,1508220. The proportion is very satisfactory to holders of the notes, but it seems curious banking to have about five times the liability on issue losing interest.

hve times the natury on issue owing interest.—
—Dr. José Carlos Rodrigues, well known in London, has been appointed Trensury agent there by the minister of finance. Sr. Rodrigues' acquaintance with British interests in Brazil and bis experience in British business formalities render his appointment one of excellent promise, and is a credit to the government nominating him.

—A decree dated on the 8th orders that all expenses incurred by government agents abroad will be settled at the Treasury agency in London, which has also power to strike out such as are not justifiable. The agent in London must under another decree of the same date give security in the sum of 80,000$ for faithful exercise of his daties.

50,000$ for faithful exercise of his daties.

—Rumors were plentiful on change on the 11th. The minister of finance is to "scale" the 5 per cent applies, issue regulations for banks of issue substituting 4 per cent, gold bonds for gold as the basis of issue, and, further, he contemplates some "big trade" in the subsidized rathway matter. There is probably something in the bank rumor for gold 4's were active and said to be in great demand.

The following figures are said to show the amount expended in Ceará as relief to that drought stricken state:

Expended to 15th Nov. 5,956,620$747 do 15th Nov. to 16th Dec. 2,838,874 724 8,795,595$471 of which the sum of 145,057$507 was by authority of the provisional government.

of the provisional government.

—The local journals are already considering the financial question solved and to confute doublers point to the steadily advancing rates of exchange. Another disagreeable awakening is in the future. The "spurt" in exchange was caused principally, if not entirely, by the preparations to meet the call in the 1889 toan due on the 15th, bestdes which foreign money must come here to meet other calls maturing.

—The bollowing are further calls made payable.
